Confocal Microscopy ----- Confocal analysis was performed using a Leica TCS SP5 II confocal microscope. The cells were incubated with the indicated antibodies for 1 hour followed by the appropriate secondary antibodies. Image stacks were acquired with a step size of 0.4 µm, and confocal images were presented as maximum intensity projections. Image Analysis and Quantification ----- Fluorescence images were acquired using a confocal microscope (LSM 510 Meta) and processed using the image processing software LSM 510 Meta. Quantitative image analysis of immunofluorescence and X-Gal staining was performed using ImageJ software (@B26)). The total intensity of the GFP signal or the H2B-mCherry signal was calculated by defining an area around the cell and the total intensity of the antibody signal was calculated in the defined area. Mean values from at least four fields of view were calculated. For the classification of mitotic cells, the DNA was stained using Hoechst, and only cells with clearly discernible chromosomes were counted. Sirolimus was introduced in Brazil to reduce the risk of acute rejection in renal transplants. Sirolimus-induced acute rejection, long-term renal function, and cardiovascular events are evaluated in this study. The study population consisted of renal recipients with a functioning graft >or=6 months, excluding patients treated with other drugs for immunosuppression or the drug for treating the donor. Two groups were evaluated: one group received sirolimus, and the other group received the calcineurin inhibitor, tacrolimus. One-year graft function was studied and the mean serum creatinine measured at this time. Incidence of acute rejection was evaluated at this and subsequent visits. The two groups were compared regarding graft function and the incidence of adverse events. To compare groups, the Mann-Whitney U test or chi(2) test was used for quantitative variables, and the Fisher exact test or chi(2) test for qualitative variables. The survival curves were analyzed by the Kaplan-Meier method. The study included 927 patients. The mean age was 46.5 years; 59% of the patients were male. After 1 year, the mean serum creatinine level was lower in the sirolimus group. The risk of graft loss was 24% lower in the sirolimus group (P =.001). The mean serum creatinine level at 1 year was 1.1 mg/ 3e3713323
