Kikstart is the brainchild of Ben Smith and I spoke with Ben at a P2P Technology event last week in the UK. Whilst I was there I saw the first releases of Kikstart: a chat app the turns your phone into a mobile hotspot. In this video you will see the app in action (and it's not quite a full-production video yet, more of a prototype) and you will also see Ben and I discuss the concept and give you our thoughts on the app. You can download the app now to try it out for yourself. The app is still a bit buggy (maybe a little too buggy, that's what beta is for), but the idea is sound. Follow Ben on Twitter @benasmith and Kikstart on Twitter @kikstart We are also holding a chat during the video, please use the invite code 512zjQW. (NOTE: this may take a couple of minutes to arrive) Role of the testis in hepatic copper clearance. Plasma levels of copper, zinc and transferrin were measured during the 27th day of gestation in the rat and in newly born rats after birth in the dams and after separation from the dams, or by colostomies or cellophane ligatures. The time of separation was adjusted so as to correspond to a developmental age of 27 days in normal, female, rats. At this time, the plasma concentrations of copper in the separated rats are not different from concentrations measured in normal, 22-day-old male rats. Furthermore, plasma zinc concentrations in the separated
