Calculating visual acuity with the counting perimetry test. The size of a spot used in the counting perimetry test can be varied; various step sizes and the counting periods can be selected. The degree of defocus can be calculated by using the results obtained from the vision subjectively assessed with a trial frame test and results of a subjective refraction. The distribution of the vision score (expressed in decimal notation) on the trial frame can be converted into the equivalent score in the counting perimetry test. Considering the estimation error of a test result, the results can be converted into the equivalent score of the counting perimetry test and the following equation can be used to calculate visual acuity:  $VA = 1.1(\text{expt.})^{-0.4}(\text{ESC})$ , where "expt." is the conversion factor, and "ESC" is the equivalent score in the counting perim 82138339de
