It is located to the south of St Peters Street and is one of the highest points in Huddersfield. History Grindstone Hill is a Bronze Age barrow that sits to the north of St Peters Street. It was excavated and revealed the remains of a circular burial chamber. Description The hill is a classic example of a Downlands barrow; a mound of earth, grass and tree roots. It is claimed to be one of the highest points in the Huddersfield area. At a height of 147 feet, it is 240 metres (242 yards) above sea level. The hill was part of a cemetery, and on the summit a Celtic Cross was found, dated to the 4th century. It was sold by the government for £100 in 1908, and was eventually bought by a local antiquarian. The cross was used as the model for the replica in St Peter's Church. Education The hill is an education centre. It is used for an education programme for children aged 5-11 called "The Adventures of Squire Grimstone". Say I have a PRIMARY KEY constraint where I'm specifying an unique index on a certain column. Does that mean that in the case that I don't specify a unique index to a column then that column is not considered unique for purposes of the constraint? For example, say that for table tblName I have: create table tblName (columnName int not null primary key, someOtherColumn text); If I didn't specify the constraint to columnName, would it still be considered unique by the database for the purposes of the PRIMARY KEY constraint? Or does a PRIMARY KEY constraint imply uniqueness anyway? To clarify, I'm asking about the effect that unique index

I want to create a service which is independent to other apps in the application and not dependent on domain services in the server. The service should provide a domain logic and not an application logic to other projects in the application. I have also looked for the MPSCFClient but it is not about what I am looking for. A: Don't think there is any, at least in the official Microsoft documentation. However, this tool looks similar to what you need: They describe how to create different types of WebJobs in Azure App Service, including Node.js, Java, Python and .NET. Mole 3e33713323
