The battle for Pennsylvania's 57th Senate district has become a fierce fight for control of the state's congressional delegation. Rick Saccone, who began the race against Democrat Conor Lamb as an enthusiastic congressman in 2013, has fallen behind in key early polls — a historic outcome for a GOP candidate in this deep-blue district. [for subscribers] "The Data Derecho" found its way into my own life The coastal Eastern Seaboard has been battered by high winds, rain and snow since last Saturday. But now my house feels it. This morning, the aftermath of my house falling down started. First, it was the ceiling. Then it became the floor. Now, it feels like the earth is moving under me. As I write this, the floor has collapsed in front of me. My house is crumbling! [Robert Fishman is a Reuters columnist.]/* Copyright (c) 2003-2017, CKSource - Frederico Knabben. All rights reserved.
