Now I want to redis-lock all keys if any key which is not updating. But I didn't get how can I lock all keys if any key is not updating. A: This should achieve your goal. Lets lock all keys in Redis using redis-lock Implement an update listener Whenever the update listener fires, it locks all keys Using the port functionality we can configure Redis to listen to updates, and we also control which keys we update. Lets make sure the config file is correct { "default" : { "port" : 6379 "output" : "serial" } } Now install redis-lock, let's initialize it. npm install --save redis-lock // Initializing redis-lock var redisLock = require('redis-lock'); var redis = redisLock(process.env.REDIS_HOST || 'localhost', process.env.REDIS_PORT || 6379); redis.on('ready', function () { console.log('All Redis servers are ready! Trying to obtain locks...'); redisLock(); }); function redisLock() { // keep this function reference to be used in the update handler var lock = redis.lock('default'); lock.keys('*', function (err, objects) { if

(err) return console.error(err); 3e33713323
