Hence, display devices have been greatly improved. In addition, with the development of an electronic industry, the number of display panels has been increased and their installation space has been reduced. Accordingly, demand for a slim display panel has been increased. Also, when a large area panel is applied to a large-sized display device, its brightness and length are seriously restricted. In addition, in order to provide high-resolution panels, thin display devices are to be used. Such a display panel is realized in various forms. For example, the display panel may have a frame structure or a structure not having a frame. FIG. 1 is a perspective view schematically illustrating the configuration of a display device having a conventional frame structure. As shown in FIG. 1, the conventional display device includes a display panel 1 and a frame 2. The display panel 1 includes a display region 3 in which an image is displayed and a peripheral region 4 surrounding the display region 3. Here, the peripheral region 4 is formed in a shape corresponding to the display region 3 and is wider than a panel region. The frame 2 includes a first frame 5 and a second frame 6. The first frame 5 is formed in a shape corresponding to the peripheral region 3e33713323
