

no Replacing a heating radiator in an apartment What to pay attention to What you need to know when replacing radiators In what cases is it allowed to use Replacement of the heating battery in the apartment is carried out in accordance with the norms and rules for the technical operation of the housing stock. If they are violated, there may be a danger of flooding neighbors, and unauthorized installation may be considered non-contractual use of the heating system. Therefore, the installation of batteries must be coordinated with all authorities. If the owner decides to install the battery himself, without approval, he will have to pay a fine and replace the battery. In this case, he will have to return the entire system to its original state. As a result, the owner of the apartment will incur significant material and time costs. In this case, he will have to return the entire system to its original state. What you need to know when replacing radiators Replacement of a heating radiator in an apartment should be carried out in accordance with the requirements of technical operation in housing and communal services. If the owner does not know how to do this, he can contact a construction company licensed to perform such work. When replacing the battery with a new one, it should be borne in mind that heaters have different technical characteristics. When choosing them, it is necessary to focus on the parameters of the heating system and the quality of the pipes. Radiators differ in the type of installation: floor, which can be attached to the floor; wall-mounted, which are mounted on the wall; radiators that are installed between the windows. They are suitable for single-pipe and two-pipe systems; batteries that are installed in the corner of the room
