Adrenal insufficiency occurs in up to 13% of premature infants have stress hyperglycemia, hyponatremia, and/or hypoosmolality. We performed a prospective evaluation of hypoadrenal function in prematurely born infants less than 34 weeks gestational age with (1) stress hyperglycemia alone, (2) severe vasopressor need or shock, and (3) hyponatremia or hypoosmolality. We found that all infants with either hypoadrenalism or stress hyperglycemia had a significantly higher mortality rate. We conclude that the degree of adrenal insufficiency is correlated with the severity of the clinical condition of the infant. Recognition of adrenal insufficiency is important because it may be amenable to glucocorticoid therapy, whereas stress hyperglycemia may have a poor prognosis.BOSTON — Every winter, the Tony Solis Home Run Derby at Fenway Park brings together the most talented baseball players in the world 82138339de
