BEEVILLE – Kim Baca is “never in trouble,” as far as public speaking is concerned. The former WICOMICO (pronounced “nick-kah-MIKE-oh”) High School (now Fort Bend Marshall High School) graduate is so comfortable in front of a crowd – whether it’s a massive outdoor rally in front of 15,000 at the Rio Grande River or telling of a love story at the Main Street Uptown Theater, she has little apprehension. Baca also has no worries about what Judge Robert Daffner, the outgoing Metropolitan Transit Authority of Harris County (METRO) board member, plans for her. When the former news reporter for 19XX TV in Beeville fills the seat she’s been working to have filled for the last two years, she will become the only woman on the nine-member board. And with four positions on the board opening – two after the March 7 elections and two after a successful election petition by Baca – the former radio personality has a great shot at an open seat and a spot on the board. Baca, 41, has started putting together a campaign and says she has support from allies on the board with whom she has worked well over the last two years, but she didn’t get a formal endorsement from METRO. At the top of the list of Baca’s potential allies is Anthony Klinger. While it is not known what possible roles the two worked together, the former Fort Bend mayor was most likely influenced by Baca when he voted to give METRO the ability to issue a $79 million bond to repair the system’s infrastructure, long believed to be in need of improvement. “That made me very happy because it’s not a political issue,” Klinger told the Beeville Enterprise during a Feb. 13 interview. “I’m not voting because of her gender. That’s not the basis for my vote, but I was happy with what she did for the city and for METRO.” Thanks to Baca’s efforts, “We’re gonna have something like money to lay (new) rail cars on the system,” Klinger said. “That helped us.” While Baca and Klinger worked together over the past two years on the METRO board, it
