Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a light scanning apparatus for projecting an image formed on a photoreceptor onto a photosensitive medium in the form of a photoconductive member. 2. Description of the Related Art A light scanning apparatus that is used in a digital copier, etc., is generally structured such that a photoreceptor formed with the use of a photoreceptor, provided with a rotational axis about which rotation of the photoreceptor is made, has a linear photoreceptor and a multifocal-mirror provided on a rotational axis and performs light scanning on the photoreceptor by using the multifocal-mirror. As such a light scanning apparatus, for example, the following apparatus is proposed: An apparatus comprising: an optical engine, provided with an incidence plane for receiving a light, an output plane for outputting the light directed from the optical engine to an image forming plane, and a rotation axis of the optical engine, a photoreceptor provided with a linear
