She was raised in Richmond, Virginia. Biography McMillen's grandfather was a jazz musician. She grew up listening to a wide variety of music and learned to play guitar at age 6. McMillen moved to Nashville in 2003 with the intention of becoming a country music singer, but was introduced to the songwriting process by her now-husband, Chad Worzel, who was at the time a staff writer for RCA Records. She had always been in a band, but had not had a musical education or a place to develop as a musician, so she took a series of songwriting classes at Belmont University. She and Worzel created All The Things in 2005, and their debut album, titled All the Things, was released in 2007. At this time, she was co-hosting a local television show, "The Mallory McMillen Show", in which she interviews artists on their music and their lives. She also appeared on the television series Hell's Kitchen while her husband was a featured singer on the show. McMillen and Worzel are currently working on their second album.
