As of now, we have the following function which is auto executed as follows: The use statement in the source folder consists of all the modules we need. Is there anyway to resolve this error? A: First, I'm not sure this is a "real" error: it's more of a warning, not an error. You can safely ignore it. What does the error need to be resolved in order to prevent auto execution of a function? There isn't a resolution; here's how you'd prevent that warning from happening: If you don't really want to use Use at all, you can use the Global directive to have the same effect. You should read this article, which explains how Global, Module, and Use are all related and what the difference is between them (except for what they do in the actual use statement).
