Director 52 Windows 7.1 32. I. Background. Electronic developers in the design and construction communities are progressively demanding more technology resources, including tools, software, and hardware, in order to develop cost-effective products. These technologies have significantly influenced practices in engineering and architecture, and how business decisions are made and analyzed. In architecture and engineering, current trends are witnessing a shift from 3D visualization using CAD and GIS (Global Information Systems) to other tools, such as MIRIAM (Multimedia-Integrated Robotic Interface and Automation Machine), HCMs (Human-Computer Interaction Modules), and IPNs (Information Processing Networks).
