Video games There are also several 3D CAD video games. Most of the games are made for the PC platform, however there is an emulator known as the "App Store", which allows the use of XBoard in Mac OS X. The most famous and recognizable is probably the MechWarrior series. Games like MechWarrior 3 and MechWarrior 4: Mercenaries, MechWarrior 4: Vengeance, MechWarrior 4: Mercenaries and MechWarrior 4: Vengeance introduce the crosshairs cursor mechanic. A number of other games have used the mechanic; they are listed in the "Cursor Mechanics" section. MechWarrior 3 introduced the "cursor focus", which improved the targeting of weapons systems such as missiles and cannons. The system allowed for accurate targeting of a weapon, even when not in the center of the screen. The cursor focus system was further improved in MechWarrior 4. A new targeting cursor is used to indicate the weapon's current target in crosshairs, with the outer circle representing the weapon's actual trajectory. This technique has been implemented in games such as Battletech, MechCommander, and MechWarrior 2. Advertising Read more Washington (AFP) US President Donald Trump on Tuesday pardoned controversial former Arizona sheriff Joe Arpaio, who was found guilty in July of criminal contempt for violating a federal court order in the waning days of Barack Obama's presidency. "I am pleased to inform you that I have just granted a full Pardon to 85 year old American patriot Sheriff Joe Arpaio," the president tweeted. "He kept Arizona safe!" Arpaio, a notorious lawman who was pardoned by President Gerald Ford after he was found guilty of contempt in 1981, has been a staunch ally of Trump. In September he tweeted that he was "pleased to announce that I have signed the Presidential Pardon of the 85 year old American patriot Sheriff Joe Arpaio." Arpaio, who came under fire for his hardline stance on illegal immigration, had been accused of racially profiling Latinos and detaining people without due process. Arpaio, a former Republican, was the tough-talking former sheriff of Maricopa County in Arizona and a strong supporter of Trump. He was the first to introduce the sheriff at the Republican convention in Cleveland in 2016. The 85-year-old, nicknamed "America's Toughest Sheriff," was a vocal supporter of Trump's run to the White House and helped lead the Republican Party's efforts to win the Latino vote. He was a strong ally of Trump during the 2016 campaign and was even floated for a job in the Department of Homeland Security after the election. Arpaio was convicted in July of criminal contempt for disobeying a federal court order in a racial profiling case. It was the first conviction of a sitting US sheriff on charges of criminal contempt. The former sheriff was set to be sentenced on October 5, the eve of the Trump administration. © 2017 AFPA new application of an old drug.
