What's new in Blood Rage: Digital Edition:

(EP) The Radiants is the fourth studio album by the German heavy metal band Blind Guardian, released on 20 September 1993 through Noise Records. With the concept and style based on A.R. Kane's book Oakenfold's Amplifier, the album was intended to be rawer and more primitive than Blind Guardian's previous albums. The album was the first to feature singer André Olbrich, after longtime frontman Hansi Kürsch's departure, and also features guitarist John Cooke. The album also saw the return of previously sampled keyboardist-backing guest musician Andy Mackay, who had left the band in 1992. The Radiants was released as a double CD and double LP (also recorded by Coon Records in the UK) and quickly rose to number one on the German album charts. The album also charted in Sweden and Switzerland, and placed in the top ten in the UK, Australia, and Japan. Concept and lyrics According to guitarist Steve Vai, the song "[Farewell to the Gods] was written in Miami in May 1993. We were living there and we were playing a show at Marlins Stadium. And this tour is also where we met our first little ones, and we began to notice that they were feeling our songs the way we felt they were feeling it. It's a very human experience, when you become a parent. You start to learn how to attach and be a child, and it made me think of how we were now becoming a different kind of being. How much have we changed throughout the years? When we started out it was 1973, and I think we've changed in thirty years at least." According to vocalist Hansi Kürsch, the concept of the album was loosely based on A.R. Kane's book Oakenfold's Amplifier. Kürsch stated, "It's very unique. If you look at the definition of music in general it might be a bit narrow. So I thought, ok, go for it." Hansi Kürsch also said, "It's not like I like videos. I never have. And we didn't want to take on that. The book is written in a very simplistic way, straightforward and naked." The band's songwriter and lead singer Hansi Kürsch wrote about the post-hippie movement, declaring to the New London Line-Up magazine, that, "The band is obsessed

In this VR version of Ding Dong XL, you play a test subject from an ultra-secret government laboratory. Each time you die, another test subject is introduced. The only way to survive is to beat your last score and unlock the 'Extreme' skin! The goals and objectives of the game are to: 1. Survive as long as you can. 2. Beat your last score. 3. Unlock a handful of cosmetic skins for your character. The game features: - Oculus Touch Controller, HTC Vive Controller, Xbox Gamepad, or the Keyboard. - Easy to learn, simple controls on Oculus or Vive Controllers, keyboard, or gamepad - Many challenges and unique events throughout including: 3D Depth, Explosions, particles flying at the screen and Menus navigable by pointing - Sit or stand VR makes it very comfortable for most users to play - An endless, fast paced and challenging arcade style game play - One button control - Unlock a handful of unique cosmetic skins for your character - Make your way to the top of the score board and beat your last high score! The only VR specific features are the Rift version includes a soft menu system that is easily navigable with the touchpad for easy access to options and settings. This does NOT appear in 'HTC Vive' version. 'Ding Dong XL' also has a Director's Cut available as well. This is an update that changes the Top Down perspective of the game to a more'side scrolling' type gameplay. It also removes the interactive collision so you can just press through the obstacles and sit as long as you want. This version is titled 'Ding Dong 2.' Future versions will feature new mechanics and gameplay. Credits: I would like to thank the visual designers at Nickervision Studios for the fantastic work, the artists in team, and the engineers and programmers who worked to make this game possible in Unreal Engine 4. I would also like to thank my wife and children for supporting my productivity and my obsession with all things me!

===== About Ding Dong XL: Ding Dong XL is a side-scrolling game for the Oculus Rift, HTC Vive and Windows VR platforms. You play the part of Ding Dong, a small, cute,
