KEY PLAYSTYLE - 2D - THINK STRAIGHT ONCE - CONSTRUCT ON YOUR OWN. - THE THOUGHTLESS ONE

The decision to play this game is, of course, YOUR OWN—and as such, I do not at all expect a game that the player had chosen to play, to be forcibly dragged along with him. However, when I first start developing a game, it is common practice to conduct as much specialized research as possible. This research serves various purposes: the difficulty of the game, the expectations of the player, etc. I have naturally, in the process of researching the many data that I accumulate, selected a solution based on the funds at my disposal. Therefore, I would now like to bring the player up to date.

“What I was playing at this point was nothing short of a sequel to Diablo; when playing the game in single-player, however, you feel a sense of loneliness that will make you yearn for the fun of connecting with others, and this becomes apparent even before you start questing. As a result, this game is the archetypal dungeon crawler with an interesting twist.” (Dualshockers.com) “The online features are fairly simple and give you a sense of camaraderie with the other party members; the characters look cute as they share their adventures in conversational text.” (Newtype USA) “This game is basically the same as Diablo, except when you are offline, you play the game with friends. The level of connection is surprisingly strong, with your party making decisions together, and you having joint control over the advancement of the quest.” (Gold’n’Glory) “Its other online play mode makes this a fairly unique game, but I could not shake the feeling that there were aspects missing, leading to the whole setup to feel a bit too good, even at the game’s introductory price.” (Mako Magazines) “If you are looking for an online experience, Elden Ring might be a relatively good selection, as its multiplayer mode is decent, and it offers some compelling RPG elements.” (VG247) KNOWN AREAS & QUEST LINES Lands Between Tarnished Plains Cult Lands Ancient Arch Fairylight Village El Dorado Cairo’s Gate Cities Midnight Valley Midnight Valley’s Castle Alchemist’s Castle Spirits of Darkness Rise in

The gameplay of the ELDEN RING game revolves around the battle system, which changes depending on the number of players involved. 1 (One Player): One Player, one account 2 (Two Player): Two Players, two accounts 3 (Three Players): Three Players, three accounts 4+ (4 or more): Four or more players, four accounts The battle system is based on a force-based system. 1) Attacking For controlling the battlefield, you can use various combinations of weapons, items, and special skills. When an attack is performed, the attacker first chooses a target. If the attack is successful, the attacker will be able to attack the target in a different manner. During this battle, you can freely change the attack area. 2) Evading You can evade an enemy attack. If an attack is successful, you can evade with a certain evasion chance, which changes depending on the weapon and the attack conditions. When you evade, you receive the damage dealt by that attack as a bonus. The attacker always attacks. 3) Receiving damage When you are attacked, you take damage. As a result of these attacks, the enemy is overcome, and his HP and MP returns to a certain level. 4) Subduing the enemy The defeated enemy is taken to the location where you hold your mouse, and this location is known as "destination". If the enemy is attacked by a weapon or skill with a low attack power but has been defeated by a skill with a high attack power, a certain power bonus is given to the attack. 5) Customization By re-equipping weapon parts and armor parts or customizing the appearance of your character, you can equip different weapons and armor. Besides the attack power, the attack effect will also change depending on the equipped weapon and armor. Weapons/armor are sorted by the number of slots, attack power and effect. 6) Equipment In addition to weapons and armor, you can equip equipment by attaching different item parts to each weapon. You can also equip equipment parts via items or a magic emote. EQUIPMENT NAME ITEM NAME It is called a different name when equipped. It is estimated that only between 2 and 4 percent of those diagnosed with cancer have a family history of the disease. Thus, cancer risk in the average person tends to be low. Cancers that develop due to a family history of the disease are referred to as familial cancer. Hereditary cancers are often termed hereditary or familial because the genetic mutation responsible for the cancer is found in more than one family member. Most familial cancers have a clear genetic component that is linked to one of over 200 known cancer susceptibility genes. In some instances, family members with a cancer are found to have similar genetic markers or mutations in the same gene, strongly suggesting that the cancer in the second family member has a genetic cause. There is a large phenotypic variation in the expression of human malignancies and a large proportion of familial cancers has only a modest reduction in cancer risk. In addition, other factors beyond a single genetic mutation are believed to play a role. This is likely due to the multiplicity of genetic defects and environmental influences. In some instances, the tumor suppressor gene involved may be present in germ line DNA, and the mutational event may then be transmitted to other family members. In other cases, the tumor suppressor may be mutated in somatic cells, particularly in those cells that contain the tumor. In addition to their phenotypic variation, familial cancers differ from sporadic cancers in two important ways. First, it is believed that familial cancers are more responsive to chemotherapy than are sporadic cancers. Second, the phenotypic expression of a cancer due to a single genetic mutation is greatly influenced by other genes. It is clear that not all mutations that can result in cancer are equal. Some mutations are important in causing cancer in only a subset of individuals. Some mutations, such as the c-Ha-ras mutation, influence cancer risk only in a subset of tumors. Also, other genes can influence the phenotypic expression of particular genes. One reason why individuals with a family history of cancer are more likely to be cured of their disease and have a better response to treatment is due to the increased likelihood of having tumor tissues removed at an early stage. But the benefit of removing the cancerous tissue diminishes as the time of diagnosis increases. Thus, the earlier the diagnosis, the greater the chance of treatment. Since the risk of developing cancer is directly proportional to the length of time between a genetic mutation and the development of a tumor, this factor is also a determinant of cancer risk. Most cancer genes have been identified
