Long ago, a council of seven gods gathered to decide whether the land of the Elden Ring should be forged into a new world. To the south lay the land of the Faeriseis, the ruins of lost civilizations, lost cities, and ancient catacombs. To the north lay the neighboring Lands Beyond, where the night lingers and the humans have bred the greatest of monsters. In the east, the sun has not set on the beautiful lands of Faerun, but the surface has been long forgotten and a dark, twisted race has built a great empire. But the most powerful of the gods—Cernunnos, Genasi, Ria, and the seven others—gave the land of the Elden Ring their blessing and commanded it be left untouched. This is the land of the Elden Ring, now a large, open field divided by an ancient wall. To the west lies the Coast of Shadow, while to the east lies the uncountable lands known as the Mountains of the Moon, Beyond, or Amlais, but all are ancient, and no one knows if they are still in our world or if they are more akin to the Lands Beyond. This is the land of the Elden Ring, where the blessing of the seven gods has been forgotten, but where the power of the Elden Ring lies dormant and where the fate of the world will be decided. In the midst of the land stands a Tower that hides many secrets, including a mysterious entrance that the Chosen King must enter. Only he can banish the horrors of the Lands

>SAN JOSE (KRON) — The San Jose Sharks are one win away from taking the Central Division lead. Patrick Marleau and Tomas Hertl each scored twice and Martin Jones made 24 saves as the Sharks beat the Minnesota Wild 4-2 on Saturday night. Filling in for Brent Burns, Logan Couture and Tyler Kennedy had just one goal combined before Burns got injured in the first period. Burns was back at practice on Monday. “Between those two trying to find the net and my penalty box, I’m just knocking the puck out,” Couture said. Couture also took a slew of shots and played in a top-nine role with Joe Thornton sidelined with flu-like symptoms and Chris Tierney playing his first game as a Shark. “That’s his niche,” Couture said. “If he can take one of those shifts he did and get 18 shifts, obviously he’ll be back on the top defensive line. He’s going to be really good when he gets out there.” Ben Lovejoy and Jeff Skinner also scored for the Wild, who finished a 2-6-1 home stand. “We haven’t been good on the road, just not playing well, not creating a lot, shots aren’t going in — and we’re getting chances,” San Jose coach Peter DeBoer said. “We’re playing better at home, so we need to play better away.” Take the puck to the net. If one or more teammate is open, try to make a hit. The Sharks had a number of chances early, goals bouncing away from Jones and the net. “I was trying to Q: How to get PHP to echo the string from a retrieved datatable I am generating a datatable containing values from a MySQL query. The datatable is being used in a.php page which is then being echoed out. It is retrieved via the function below: `$sql = 'SELECT * FROM table ORDER BY this_id DESC LIMIT 10'; $result = mysql_query($sql, $this->database);` This returns a numbered series of unordered rows. I have found a way to sort this, which is in the same file but echo " does not work with the returned datatable. Any ideas on how to get a 'this_id' to be echoed rather than the complete row? I guess you'd have to assign the results to an array or something like that? I'd be grateful for some help!

A: Assuming your 'this_id' field will be the first value after the column header, you can either assign them to an array like so: `$result = mysql_query($sql, $this->database); $rows = array(); while ($row = mysql_fetch_assoc($result)) { // cycle through row, assign to array $rows[] = $row; }` And then echo the table header at the top of your file? Or you can use this loop: `while ($row = mysql_fetch_assoc($result)) { echo "";`
