Biography Alexander Archer was the son of John Archer and Susanna Sprigs, and was baptized on 31 July 1695 at St Clement Dannes. A relative of the poet John Smith, he was also a distant cousin of Charles Churchill (who in 1711 named his son the same, due to "great admiration and esteem" for Alexander). While visiting France and the Netherlands in 1700 he was befriended by Prince Charles Edward Stuart, who took an interest in Archer's poetry, and took him as a page. Charles hired Archer, initially as a musician, but also allowed him to act as a bodyguard to the Prince. Archer remained a page for six years, being present at the Jacobite rising of 1715. Archer played a part in the death of his first cousin, Henry Seymour Conway, in the Battle of Malplaquet on 1709, picking up a musket from his uncle, Sir John Seymour, and supporting the Prince of Wales as he took him through the thick of battle. In 1716 Archer was mentioned in a letter from his wife, Jean. She states she is returning home, as she has found sufficient means to support herself and her son. Archer's absence from the pages of English history indicates he died shortly before 1721.
