EA Sports also updated the engine that powers Frostbite, the game engine that powers FIFA 20. According to the developer, the improved engine delivers more reactive physics, dynamic grass that reacts to player actions and lighting improvements. FIFA 22 will be released on October 27th for Xbox One, PlayStation 4, PC and Xbox 360. Players will be able to compete in online matches and 4-player local matches. Check out the screenshots below to see more gameplay. It's been three years since FIFA 17 was launched, but the obsession with EA Sports continues with the latest iteration of the series, FIFA 22. New modes, cameras and characters are sure to be welcomed, and the formula has always been award-winning, so this has me excited. I have been playing FIFA since the days of Kick Off 2 on the Game Boy. I've missed the series since leaving Electronic Arts as a player. Now I have returned as the Game Director, and as such I've been trying to look at the franchises future with a sense of what it means to both the fan base and to myself. Over the course of the last couple of months, I've been playing FIFA - who are I am, why have I returned and what am I doing? What are the parts of the future I am looking at? Let's take a look, shall we? Since FIFA 17, our player models have been based around a concept called Physically Based Animation. What this means is that our character models react to everything you do in a game. The result is that we have been able to create more reactive characters that have a certain "feel" to them. We've worked with EA's technicians to deliver these improvements and you will be able to see them in action when FIFA 22 launches in October. One of the things I am most excited about is the FIFA Interact. This new mode will allow players to take control of the whole pitch and dictate the action. This will be a new way to play and you will be able to interact with your opponent as well as play in fun ways such as Put-backs, headers, and set-pieces. Players will also feel more connected to the pitch and this will help build a stronger bond with their club and the crowd. I am also really excited for the new Ultimate Team modes. Ultimate Team mode has been growing in popularity over the last few years and will continue to do so as people enjoy the bonuses of a collection of cards. FIFA 22 will have five Ultimate Teams and you can
