It also allows you to transfer files from hard drive and convert them to the iPod format. The iPod is a popular device for the users who like to listen to music or audiobooks but this small device also offers the possibility to read books. Starting with the 3rd generation when the note reader was implemented, the users can access text files on their portable device. Although some users might find it hard to read a book on a small screen, others might want to take advantage of this opportunity by transferring ebooks on their iPod. Unfortunately, you cannot simply copy the book to the iPod folder since the format might not be supported. Additionally, the iPod can only open the files that are saved in a certain folder which makes the operation a little more complicated. This is where iPodLibrary comes in and allows you to effortlessly convert and transfer a book to the Notes folder and generate the chapter structure. You just need to select the file that you want to transfer, enter the book name and click the Import button. The app supports text files, HTML pages, PDF documents and the LIT format which can be converted into note files. The utility automatically splits the large books into

The app supports text files, HTML pages, PDF documents and the LIT format which can be converted into note files. The utility automatically splits the large books into chapters in order to comply with the four kilobyte file limit. Since the iPod has a limitation on the number of available notes, you should set the maximum available chapters for each book. This tool also allows you to browse the existing library, remove the completed books and manage the available chapters. In order to optimize the iPod performance you can specify the current chapter and remove the previous notes. If you have ever thought about using your iPod as an ebook reader, the iPodLibrary is an efficient tool that can convert your books to the right format and upload

Your Computer Settings can sometimes cause file transfer errors. The most common cause of file transfer errors is incorrect settings on your computer, especially those related to file extensions, or file associations. Quick File Extension Fix By default, Windows file associations work as follows: All files ending in.HTML are opened with your web browser (Internet Explorer, Netscape). All files ending in.RTF are opened with your word processor application (Word, Notepad) All files ending in.DOC are opened with your word processor application. All files ending in.MSG are opened with Microsoft Outlook. If you want your Documents to open in another program or for other types of file to open in a program other than the default, you will need to change the file association. How to Fix File Extensions For example, if you want to make a document open in Notepad whenever it is double-clicked, you would go to the "Open With" tab of the "Properties" box and choose "Notepad". Once you have done this, you would save the file as a "text document" and it should open in Notepad every time it is saved. For more information, see Microsoft.com's File Extension Help. Optimizing Your File Associations You should ensure that only essential applications are associated with files. If you are opening a.DOC file (a document), do not open it in Microsoft Word. When you open a file, Windows is trying to determine its purpose in order to use the appropriate program to open it. If you are opening a file that is not associated with an application, Windows goes to the next best application to open
