New mini-dungeons for 4th Edition Description These mini-dungeons were designed with 4th Edition rules in mind, using common dungeon types in larger groups of 4 characters. The purpose is not to create epic adventures, but just a short dungeon for 4 PCs in the standard military role. You can use these in any campaign, or as standalone modules. Each mini-dungeon includes: A 5 page document with the following information: A short description of the dungeon. The location of entrances and exits. Designed for 4 characters of levels 3-5. A brief word to guide how you can start with the mini-dungeon. An optional spreadsheet to map out the room layout (totally optional, but helps a lot when running the mini-dungeon). Each mini-dungeon is inspired by the four members of a military elite unit. These four adventurers use their wits and gear to survive within the dark and deadly dungeons below the surface. Each mini-dungeon has several encounters for the party to experience before the final confrontation. As the group progresses through the dungeons, they encounter monsters, traps, treasures, and even dangerous forces as they seek the four heroes' fortune at the end of the line. You can find more information about each of the groups on their corresponding image. This does not mean that there are only four mini-dungeons in the bundle, as each mini-dungeon includes 4 encounters. When you purchase this bundle, you will receive all the mini-dungeons immediately, even if you already have some of the files. Five mini-dungeons which can be used in any campaign and dungeon set. Short, setting-agnostic adventures for 5th Edition, which can easily be inserted anywhere in your campaign. Save your data to any folder you want. At home, each mini-dungeon comes with a 5-page document

What's new:

Anti-Jump-Man is a 1983 American comedy film starring Don Adams, Mark Harmon, Fred Waring, Anne Schedin and Kenneth Mars. The plot concerns a scientist who develops a ridiculously simple countermeasure to a rogue missile from a rogue country. Plot The spoof comedy film tells the story of scientist Dr. John Anderson from the United States Army Security Agency who uses a quantum computer to detect the secret code of a rogue missile being launched from an advanced space vehicle (ASV) called the "Caveman" by rogue countries in the Middle East. He acquires a dim view of his fellow scientists and learns the hard way when a new computer program is uncovered. Later in the movie, the advisor to President Nylophone wants to use information provided by the secret code to order a preemptive missile attack on a secret base in Iceland owned by an evil galactic organization that dismembers homeless children with rocket launchers and plays hockey with single men who are killed by double-pronged cheetahs. Due to the existence of a new device called the "Killerstick" which contains a device capable of matching the computer's calculations for the unknown code of the missile, Captain Cliff Limberly of the United States Air Force intercepts an ASV piloted by a group of "Night Men" and discovers that it is carrying a creature which explains all of these strange actions. Captain Limberly awakens the CAVEMAN (Career Air Vindicated Elimination Man) and detects the cavemen telecommunication device and realizes that the caveman is why it is still alive. The CAVEMAN is flown on board the U.S. Air Force helicopter UN-Dang-It to the secret base in Iceland where a small team of scientists attempt to activate the CAVEMAN, while the other scientists are being wiped out by the flying rocket-launchers and the sinister creatures. The Killar Stick is destroyed by the flying rocket-launchers until the CAVEMAN is destroyed and Captain Cliff Limberly recovers data on the missile attack on Iceland. However, despite the information, the advisor informs President Nylophone that he "just cannot" order missile attacks without direct congressional authorization since it was revealed in a recent intelligence report that the Missile Attack Providers are up to no good. The Night Men scatter and Captain Cliff Limberly prepares to ask for Congressional authorization for missile attacks while the advisor informs him of another problem:
