Q: Which reference should I give to define the  $n$ th derivative? I just want to ask about which reference to give. Let  $f$  be a function and  $f^{(n)}$  denote the  $n$ th derivative of  $f$  where  $n \in \mathbb{N}$ . What I want to know is whether we can use the following equations:  $f^{(n)}(x) = n! \int_0^x f^{(n+1)}(t) dt$  for  $n \in \mathbb{N}$  or whether it is valid to say  $f^{(n)}(x) = \frac{d^n}{dx^n} f(x)$ ? A: It is valid to say  $f^{(n)}(x) = \frac{d^n}{dx^n} f(x)$ , but note that the notation  $f^{(n)}$  isn't standard. Most authors would write  $D^n f(x)$ .

Introduction ===== We report a case of pneumonia in an 80-year-old woman with idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis (IPF). The patient was first diagnosed with IPF when she was 67 years old, and then had frequent exacerbation of interstitial pneumonitis until she was 79 years old. She was then admitted to our hospital because of rapid progression of dyspnea. Although the initial roentgenogram revealed marked reticular shadows throughout both lungs, chest computed tomography (CT)

gy "Piggy Puggy Puggy" is a song recorded by English musician Bono and the musician U2. The song was first performed live by Bono and guitarist The Edge in March 1980, and it was released on 11 March 1985 by Island Records as the third single from The Joshua Tree (1985). The song received positive reviews from music critics, who described it as an entertaining, funky track with a shoegazing feel. "Piggy Puggy" has been featured in a number of U2 concert tours, most notably the Joshua Tree Tour (1987-1990), Vertigo Tour (1991-1993), Elevation Tour (1997-1999) and All That You Can't Leave Behind Tour (2000-2005). The live version is considered one of the greatest tracks of the 21st century, according to the editors of Rolling Stone. The music video for the song was directed by Fashion Film. It was filmed at Bolsa de Progreso Mall, Bogotá, Colombia and was shot over two days in March 1985. The clip received positive reviews from critics, who praised the cinematography and Bono's performance. The song has been performed live at every concert since 1985, and has been included on three studio albums. The 2005 U2 tour documentary, No Line on the Horizon, uses the live version performed in Hamilton, New Zealand on 25 May 1997 as its opening song. Background In 1981, U2 formed a band named after the 1941 film On the Town. The band was to be composed of Bono, the Edge (guitar), Larry Mullen Jr. (drums) and Adam Clayton (bass), all from Mullen's High School in Ranelagh, Dublin. The group was initially a rhythm and blues band, but would begin playing guitar on the first song, "Flame", which Bono would write. Bono saw "In the Name of Love", a song written and performed by Simple Minds, playing on a British Top of the Pops from 1979, and has said the song "hit [him] like an ambulance going down the wrong side of town". Bono appreciated the band's style, writing "I left school with a copy of the Sinclair ZX81 on my lunch money each day in order to join Simple Minds and write 'In the Name of Love'". Bono would often use saxophone in on key points, such as the coda, on later written material. The
