là l’une des cartes de jeu les plus attendues de l’industrie cinématographique. Etur a publié deux ans pour le développement du jeu réalisé par Joël Debout et l’équipe de Monster In Games (EPG). L’objectif du MO (Multiplayer Online) de Tiny Tower est de se faire la plus grande aventure de personnages imaginaires dans le monde du jeu. Cette plateforme doit permettre de voir l’ensemble de saisons dans un arbre, offrir des compétences pour améliorer les liens avec les habitants, voyager dans le temps, gagner des richesses et se débarrasser de ses monstres. Parmi les nombreuses fonctions, citons : le commerce (voir les commerces d’autrui), le boulot, la constitution de l’équipe, soit le processus de création de la vie du projet, la gestion des recettes, la vente de billets ou encore la gestion de notre magasin et d’autres composants du jeu. Comment il y a de nombreuses années, Joël Debout a mis du temps à devenir intéressé à la création de l’outil Massive Multiplayer Online (MMO), appelons-le ainsi. Elle devait répondre avant tout au défi humain, la création d’un monde de jeu interactive interactif, accessible aussi bien à un courtier que si l’on se sentait passionné pour les jeux vidéo. Rien de plus simple, puisqu’il s’agissait de tester et de découvrir les limites de notre imagination humaine. C’était une action fondamentalement paradoxale, car en effet, l’un des défis que le jeu considérait à l’arrière-plan était de fournir ce raisonnement.
