The social impact of atypical parkinsonism: a focus on non-endemic disorders. Atypical parkinsonian disorders (APD) are frequently considered to be rare conditions with little social impact. However, our recent research shows that APD, specifically Parkinson's disease with dementia (PDD), has a substantial impact on the quality of life of patients, their families, and carers. In particular, PDD reduces the quality of the carer-patient relationship and alters interactions with other people. Moreover, atypical parkinsonism significantly affects the ability of both patients and carers to maintain their roles and leads to loss of social roles. This review focuses on the social impact of APD, particularly PDD.
