Jetter Van Klik Oracle VM VirtualBox 5.1.28 (Free Version) Everytime I do an update my computer or the VMWare thing will not boot. I just get the purple screen with white writing on it. Now I know that it has to do with VirtualBox and not my VMware, because I uninstalled VMware and re-installed it and I still get the same problem. I followed the uninstall and install of VirtualBox over and over and I still can't get VirtualBox to work. I downloaded virtualbox.org and I did the internet update, but it still won't work. I removed everything and re-added the manager of the update and it still won't work. I can still run virtualbox from command prompt but it won't work in my game of choice. Does anyone have any idea of what's wrong? Everytime I do an update my computer or the VMWare thing will not boot. I just get the purple screen with white writing on it. I have a client that is currently working on a project that uses PhoneGap to load their app on the devices. They've just informed me of a great feature (Networked Push Notifications) in PhoneGap and I wanted to see if they could just use Cordova to add this feature. My main reason for wanting to do this is that they already have an application for iOS and Android in Cordova and the difference of re-writing the networked push notification logic would be pretty small. If I use this route will it be challenging to support other platforms, especially if I ever want to release to the Play Store

© SEGAQ: What does "countable" mean in math? Here is a definition of "countable": N is a countable set if it can be written as a countable union of nonempty sets. My question is what does "countable" mean? A: The definition of countable is a short way of defining the axiom of choice. If you use more specific language, it will look like this: N is countable if $N=\bigcup_\alpha\{A_\alpha\mid A_\alpha\in\mathcal{A}\land\exists B\in\mathcal{B}\forall \alpha(A_\alpha\subseteq B)\}$ for some $\mathcal{A}$, $\mathcal{B}$ such that $\{A_\alpha\mid A_\alpha\in\mathcal{A}\}$, $\{B\mid B\in\mathcal{B}\}$ is countable. The idea is that if you know how to count from $\mathcal{A}$ to $\mathcal{B}$, you can count from $\mathcal{A}$ to N. You can also do that from $\mathcal{B}$ to N: there are some $A_\alpha\in\mathcal{A}$ and $B_\beta\in\mathcal{B}$ such that $A_\alpha\subseteq B_\beta$ for every α and β. So $N=\bigcup_\alpha\{A_\alpha\mid A_\alpha\in\mathcal{A}\land\exists B\in\mathcal{B}\forall \alpha(A_\alpha\subseteq B)\}=\bigcup_\alpha\{B_\beta\mid B_\beta\in\mathcal{B}\land\forall\alpha(A_\alpha\subseteq B_\beta)\}$. Hence, if $\mathcal{A}$,

$\mathcal{B}$ countable, then so is N. Friday, October 17, 2008 Hassan al-Banna and the birth of al-Takfir
