I have tried using Windows Task Scheduler, but haven't found a solution. I have also tried using a C# application I wrote to start it. The process is to run a service at the time specified, to generate some reports. After the reports are generated, the service stops. Right now, we are using an unattended startup script for it, and we are having a lot of problems with a service starting and stopping twice, once at the specified time, and again during the next startup cycle. If it's not running, the scheduler doesn't seem to start it until the next startup cycle. Our service has a console application used to generate the reports that causes the problem. If the service is running, the console application does not seem to create the reports in the first place, and if it is run after the service has been started, it takes the service a long time to stop. When it stops, it will run again when it is started, but not to generate reports. The problem is there is no log file, so I can't tell the service to stop if it is misbehaving. Can anyone suggest the best way to start a service on a regular basis with a Windows Server? Can anyone suggest anything to look for in a log file? Are there any other potential problems with running a console application from a service? I would have to support Windows Server 2008, but if there is an alternative, that will be acceptable. Just to narrow it down, the only thing I need is what might be in a Windows service log file. A:

The action of the game takes place in the mountain kingdom of Callasia, a land of spectacular forests and rolling meadows. Thousands of years ago, dwarfs carved the mountains into dwellings and fortifications in an effort to survive the turmoil that came with the Great Callasian War. Now that the conflict has ended, the dwarves that remained behind have sought to rebuild their land, establishing new towns and new fortresses where they can trade, train new heroes, and perfect their defenses in preparation for the coming chaos. Although the war left much of Callasia in ruins, the dwarves have worked hard to rebuild their old glory, and have already put plans into motion for new heroes to join their forces. The game features 4 new playable factions, each lead by a mighty hero with a unique focus on military, economic, or defensive strategy. The 4 factions are the Stoneborn, led by the fearsome Swordmage Velkazar; the Cavernfolk, led by the zealous Rivalen; the Langar, led by the dauntless RunnerAlduin; and the Lutari, led by the cruel Galantha. The game's campaign features 9 new levels, all requiring a degree of strategy and teamwork in order to succeed, and all of which offer new tactics for the players. Game Features: * Challenging, new gameplay featuring 4 new playable factions and 9 new levels * Fully-realized, turn-based combat system, with all kinds of unique units and Hero Traits for each of the 4 new factions * 12 new cards for strategic tactics and will-pushes * All new Artillery System based on Impact Events, each representing a different gameplay scenario * Unique Campaign with 9 levels * Epic 4-Player Skirmish Maps * New Heroes: Annoyance, Flamestrike, Silo, Spear, and the new comer: Guardian! * New Enemies: the Majestic Minotaur, the Dreadful Cavespawn Game Screenshots & Trailer: ...The building at the corner of Talmon and Freemont Sts. has been vacant for almost a year. 4 million square feet, an office building that housed at least 60,000 workers, and yet now sits abandoned. What's new:

for Eden* Post Colony offers many new features to players who already own some of the old features such as building and weapon construction, new overlays, decorative building storage, and more. The main features of this release are the Crystal Weapons and Crystal Building. Eden Rising: Crystal Weapons Pack The Crystal Weapons Pack are weapons that can absorb other weapons and weapons built by NPC weaponsmiths, allowing players to enter combat with a weapon made of a materials other weapons. Sources of materials for Crystals are automatically generated throughout the world outside of settlements, that spawn at random intervals. (This feature can be turned on and off in the "Options" → "BtO" sub-menu by checking the corresponding box). There is a chance every time a player takes a weapon back to their home, their weaponsmith will create a Crystal Weapon for use in other weapons. If there are multiple crystals found within the weapon, they will interlock with each other. (The player can select what order the crystals are in by selecting each crystal in the inventory). This process can take minutes and hours, depending on the size and type of weapon, and can even produce multiple weapon types by combining multiple crystals. A Crystal Weapon does not go through all the same process as its parent weapon. Namely when the player takes the Crystal Weapon back to their home, they will receive the contents of the Overlay screen along with the crystal weapon in the inventory and will be able to handcraft it again as a child weapon. RezCoins are needed in order to craft weapons. 1 coin is required per weapon, which is earned by using the weapon. For weapons that require multiple coins to craft, for example a longbow, there is a currency multiplier based on the type of weapon. Some enemies will drop MOAR Coins and others drop REZCOINS. Crystal Weapons have a number of benefits; they can absorb other weapons that are not initially made of crystals to give them special properties and can be used in other weapons once they are broken down (meaning they can be built and leveled up more times than a normal weapon). Crystal can also be crafted from materials found in the loot from resources and creatures, such as blue/white metal crystals from relics of Skellium and dark crystals from Tiresius. Additionally, some users have stated that weapons crafted from materials can one-shot enemies early on. There are currently 72 descriptions of crystals (excluding earth and water
