Product Description:

The Roman Empire is the world super superpower in this cool strategy game! Build your armies and industries, defeat your enemies or let them attack! It is you who makes the Rome while the computer provides the army! Enjoy the fun of strategy playing and creating the Roman empire...

A new history, a new power, the only historical figure that conquered the entire world was the Roman emperor Caligula. He too, of course, conquered the world. And here, the world conqueror is the player!

Build different buildings and upgrades to make your city grow and become stronger with every new game level. Build your troops, industries and weapons, recruit people to armies, take over allies and be the first to conquer the world!

In addition to the worlds best strategy game, you are also able to edit the game map at home. Once you are satisfied with your creations you are also able to save and import them into BattleCraft to add them to your collection of historical maps.

The game also has a scenario editor, where you can create all kinds of scenarios. Just add your enemies and you are ready to play! Let the computer test your skills, will your gaming computer be the one who conquers the world?

Never played a better strategy game to conquer the world?

Riding on his hobby of playing and creating historical WII replicas, the game designer has created a game that invites us to role play as the great Roman emperor Caligula.

Guided by this objective,

What's new:

Through its documentary stories, André Lubaetz creates immersive narratives, re-establishing forgotten time periods of ancient history, both real and imagined. His most recent film, Road to Rome, offers a firsthand account of a Hungarian artist-bodyguard's (Lubaetz's actual assistant, upon whom he based the title role) parallel life as a philhellene mercenary, based in the fortress town of Raszak, squeezed on the southern tip of the Balkan Peninsula. The story spans Lubaetz's actual journey through the Albanian-Greek border from occupied Europe to the ancient ruins of Diósgyor. An educator with many years of experience, Lubaetz spoke with Ambika Singh about his work and ways to get it out to a broader audience. Ambika Singh is an award-winning journalist and documentary filmmaker in India. Ambika's award-winning work has been broadcast on international broadcast networks including Discovery Channel, TLC, National Geographic, CNN International, and NHK WorldTV. Her documentaries have screened at international festivals, such as TEDxShillong, The Indian Documentary Film Festival, and Document. Her fiction film, Story on Fire, was released in 2014. Eric Hi, Eric, and welcome to BatNews. Can you tell us a bit more about your project Road to Rome? I brought this project together with Hungarian producer, Balazs Horvath. He approached me to create a documentary based on the experiences of the historical travelers, soldiers and mercenaries, who were forced to live in Albania and Greece as the Ottoman Empire soldiers were approaching their borders in the 16th century. They crossed the barriers of the Ottoman's empire to evade capture and defend their families and friends. As this was a significant historical and personal experience for me, I wanted to create a feature-length, immersive documentary with the intention to translate it into a novel of the same name. This is a real-life international epic about a small band of un-heroic and ultimately doomed travelers who all shared one common purpose. Along with John Pic de Moles, a French linguist, Gergely Perevetele a mathematician and Daniel Vécseley a nobleman and poet, Karoly Dannheimy a Hungarian artist, they are on a pilgrimage to the city of Diósgyor. When speaking to their common goal, one of the travelers agrees it's not prudent to divert his journey
