Once I find it I'd like to save the current line number and it's contents into a variable. The issue I'm having is the variable is often not being updated. I've also tried out a couple variations, but I always get the same result. I have a gzipped file. I can pipe the results of the find to a less command and I do it every once in awhile. How can I make this whole process just a bit faster? #!/bin/bash # Need to be able to use the full path here when calling find. Get to be a pain otherwise. find. -name "*my.xml"

Credits .Smoothing Smoothing is the act of smoothing out an uneven surface such as a fabric. This process removes the defects and uneven areas in a fabric so that it feels more comfortable to wear and so it is visually pleasing. The process is popular in the garment industry as it creates a betterlooking garment. It is also used in stained glass, where it is known as "burning". See

She was nominated, as was John Lithgow for Winston Churchill. Winston Churchill is the new miniseries from Stephen Cook and Julian Fellowes. The two past winners of the Satellite Award for best actor/actress in a miniseries or movie, Sarah Polley for her Hulu series The Path, and Thandie Newton for West of Memphis, were nominated as well. Lithgow will next be seen in the next Robert Duvall vehicle, The Gilded Age. Hospitalization due to ambulatory care sensitive conditions in Northern Haiti: potential increases under the public policy. The provision of health care that is appropriate and accessible to the community is becoming increasingly important given the limited budget for and demand of health care in developing countries such as Haiti. Ambulatory Care Sensitive Conditions (ACSCs) are typically avoidable through effective community preventive measures, public policies, and proper hospital care. We used a retrospective cohort design to describe hospitalization due to ACSCs in northern Haiti between January 2000 and December 2004, as well as to predict the ACSC hospital
