HyperMotion Technology translates everything players do on the pitch into authentic, dynamic player movements. Players become hyper-intelligent, turning off the ball and making decisions using their instincts and intelligence. "This technology has been created as a result of extensive research and a continuous dialogue with players. It brings a level of authenticity and physicality the video game has not previously been able to achieve. It's incredible and brings a whole new dimension to the player's game," said Sepp Blatter, FIFA President. Demi Mirabelli, VP and Executive Producer for FIFA added: "I am very happy to introduce FIFA 22 'HyperMotion' to the world. It gives the players an infinite amount of unique movements to do on the pitch, all through gameplay. We are massively excited with this new technology and believe it will push the evolution of football in video games to new heights." Cross-play and Oculus Rift Gamers who have an Oculus Rift virtual reality headset will be able to play against friends and compete in a VR tournament in FIFA 22. Cross-play is also coming to FIFA 22 for PS4 and Xbox One, as well as Nintendo Switch, Mobile devices, and Windows PCs.

Customization The player name and team shirt can be customized to a gamer's liking. There are more than 1,100 customizable player faces. Players also have the ability to decide how their hair styles and body types look in-game. FIFA 22 launches on 23rd September on PlayStation 4, Xbox One and Nintendo Switch.

Wondernet Wondernet is an educational portal designed to provide the public with information about the wonder that nature is. It is an educational resource and a 'wonder network' that seeks to explain how we can gain from the natural environment. Information for the public The portal was conceived by Jan Hogestyn and Kirsten Steenkiste as part of the Earth Awards Collaboration in 2007. The planning work took place in the Netherlands. The project took several years and Jan Hogestyn was involved in the process of building the first version of the website. It is developed in collaboration with several partners including: the Netherlands Environmental Assessment Agency, Wetlands International, the World Wide Fund for Nature, regional government areas in the Netherlands, and an international advisory panel. Other partners are the IUCN Global Biodiversity Information Facility,

In summary, even though I know I do well, my doc is a little nervous about going slow with the meds and recommends a switch to a different type of med that is easier on the liver and less sedating, and has a stronger "high" effect. This will have its downside, since it will take longer to see the effects and I will probably need more meds to get rid of the depression that caused me to have a "negative psychotic" episode in the first place. He's going to give me the new meds for 7 days then see how I react. If I need more, he will increase the meds by increments until I reach the correct dosage. I have a cousin who was on a low dosage of Lithium and the only side effect she had was a mild headache. I think that is really a first world problem, with all the drugs that people are becoming addicted to. John, it is true that there are some differences in the effects of other medications on us, with the green being on the left and the red being on the right. I know of one person who was turned off from Lithium because of the side effects of sedation. The nice thing is that he also had a lower level of manic symptoms and seemed more rested. It is also true that I could probably still do a very good job at work with the side effects of the new med. I just happen to have a really shitty boss right now and
