I am not a fan of the show/book. As a matter of fact, I find the whole thing very disturbing. Though I am familiar with the format of the show, I've never seen it all in one sitting. I was hoping that you might be able to answer a few questions for me. 1. From what I remember, Oprah made your dad a promise that he could see his family for a week if he agreed to not drink. Is this a promise that he made to himself, or was he coerced into making this decision? 2. From what I understand, he claimed to be innocent of the crime, even though he has been convicted and has served time for it, and even though his fingerprints were all over the murder weapon. According to the book, didn't he say that they were unable to prove that he had fired the gun? I can't find that transcript on the news clip where she first interviewed him. And isn't it true that he was arrested within 24 hours of the murder? I looked it up again and my understanding was he committed suicide. I was shocked and horrified of what happened to him, but I don't doubt that he did kill her. I am troubled, though, because he was saying that he didn't do it, that he was innocent. It's not fair that a man whose life is in shambles is still vilified. Is it true that his mother and sister are still talking about how horrible he is and, by extension, how horrible his family is? I'm sorry, but my dad's sleeping on the couch right now because he had a minor heart attack yesterday, and my mom keeps saying that he's not supposed to be up because his heart is weak. I think she's worried because when he was mugged on the street last year, he received serious stab wounds. I don't want to upset them with anything that might be on my mind, but this book, and this show, have caused me stress and

All the clubs throughout the country are divided into groups and placed into Regional League tables. Each league is divided into four groups (Northern, Central, Southern and Eastern groups) and seven groups of four. The main groups are the Senior League which contains the clubs placed directly in the Elite Division. The next level consists of three groups - Regional League (first 3 levels), State League and All India League. There are 41 State League groups which are also divided into four groups of six and four groups of four. Each state league group is named after the name of the state in India followed by a letter.
