Since the dawn of civilization, mortal men and women have prayed to the gods for help in times of need. However, those who had prayed were left wondering, and those who did not have been left to fend for themselves. The time of gods had long passed, and only lucky ones could pray to them. It was said that there were few gods left out there, but everyone prayed to them anyway. Magic was forbidden. Life was a struggle, just like the world of Tarnath – a land on the brink of extinction, which is why the world’s last remaining elves are taking drastic measures to eradicate its human inhabitants. They are the most prominent beings in the Eberon Campaign Setting, and also the most fearsome. They are the Elden: the Elves of Tarnath. Why are they so fearsome? -They have a number of illusions that allow them to appear to be on both land and in the air, making them both elusive and powerful -They boast offensive and defensive abilities that, in the right hands, can be very powerful -Their race is strong and proud -They are a race of warriors, and they prefer to use magic to aid in their battles, not out of a fear of it but a sense of honor and respect -They do not like to think that others are better than them -They are not afraid of death. All they want is to see the species that has been trampling upon them wiped out They are the Elden, the Elves of Tarnath. Elden Lords. They’ve always been the pinnacle of elven society, just like the nobility are the pinnacle of human society, and, according to the prophecy, these noble elves are supposed to be the saviors of the world. But we all know how that turned out. The elves started dying, by the thousands, and now the whole world is in ruins. Tarnath is only a small part of the world. All the elves want is to see the human race and other races wiped out, and that is why they have declared war on the world. That is where you come in. You are a low-level elven conscript, sent to Tarnath under the guise of a lordling, but you have no idea what kind of lie you are being fed. You are but a tool for these elves, and now you have been sent to the very birthplace of the elves in
