Believed to be the first time Facebook's hacker has been outed and is less sophisticated than previously believed. Abhi$te$ also revealed the hacker's username was f8u5ZdMy4fxt. He told GlobalPolice.Org that he was using a modified version of a program known as FireSheep, which hijacks web-browser traffic and steals passwords. F8u5ZdMy4fxt used a tool called Mimikatz to authenticate to Active Directory accounts," Abhi$te$ explained." He said he managed to "extract" 3,131 Facebook passwords, and had shared them with others for "fun". "However I decided against it and also reported this attack with the above Facebook user-handling investigation. Sadly, it turns out the attacker was successful in spoofing his own user-agent to get away with his crimes," Abhi$te$ said." I have removed the user-agent spoof from the link I shared. However, having the Active Directory credentials I can again successfully access the victims' accounts." Abhi$te$ added: "I don't intend to disclose their usernames until I report the attack to Facebook directly. I don't want to do any damage to Facebook. I just want their attention." One of Facebook's security chief, Alex Stamos, said in a blog post that the company has made changes to put things right. He said: "We believe the data was taken at a large scale last month and was most likely being exploited. In addition to the users whose accounts were affected, we're checking the accounts of friends, family and others. "We have also addressed an issue that appeared to allow access to some content on Facebook that was posted by some friends. The bug caused us to stop any attempts to read this content." But at the time I discovered files.fb.com the defective v0.18 has already been updated to v0.20..
