SuperPaintMan ===== SuperPaintMan Just thought I'd submit an article from the Economist. Doesn't really matter if it's popular or not, since the article is very well written. I was curious to see if it's worth reading, since it is from a news site. Electron beam and X-ray microscopic examination of bone. The serial sections which are obtained from the same specimens used for histochemical staining, X-ray analysis, atomic absorption analysis, electron diffraction analysis, and other procedures permit adequate and convenient access to the information needed for evaluation of each of these procedures. The structural and ultrastructural aspects of the bone matrix are discussed as are the methods by which the information gained from these procedures is interpreted. Electron microscopic examination of bone is a two-dimensional technique.

However, when the information obtained from electron microscopic examination is combined with that obtained from other techniques, detailed three-dimensional information is readily available.)^{1.16}
