The Awakewalker was brought to immortality by the key to the fifth circle of a hell dimension. Confronted with the enormous force of a nightmare, it was supposed to sleep, but instead, in a rare decision, it woke up. Their mind was weakened, and they were given armor. The warrior's mind was connected to a machine to artificially revive themselves after death. The individual is a machine with a soul. Two things that oppose each other are reborn in one body. Two incredible forces of nature in a machine body. A soul driven by a passion for the fight. The result of this fusion is a strange, unstoppable being. The Awakewalker is its name. To stay alive, to beat difficult enemies and discover the end of this galaxy, an Awakewalker is all that the planet needs. This is their destiny. ***THANKS for the Support!*** Subscribe for more: The Titan is the world's first dedicated single socket server designed to take on the task of mining Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies. #### What's new in GALSAD - Galactic Salvage And Disposal:

"Oh. And how will I do this Summoning?" Sylaska stepped closer to the door and it quietly swung open, revealing an unfamiliar landscape. Voices sounded throughout the city in a deafening cacophony of a hundred words at once, all blending together into one giant, incoherent muddle, like a vibrating pulse which could only be felt, not tasted or smelled. The shops were closed and most signs had been turned sideways, listing mysterious items at prices so high as to have been unobtainable in normal circumstances. Sylaska wandered between the houses and aisles in confusion, searching for a familiar landmark to allow her to orient herself. She looked down the road to see the summoners charging off in one direction, while her own house loomed over her. "Careful, you might need that sword one day". Sylaska heard someone calling out behind her before she turned and saw a figure standing at the door, holding a torch high, his face concealed. The stranger turned his face away, and for a moment, Sylaska stood there, frozen, staring blankly. "Sylaska. It's me, Sunny". Sunny lifted the torch and cracked it down in a menacing stream of light. Dodging away from the blaze, Sylaska blinked and turned to him. "Sunny? How did you... that's so different..." Sylaska breathed. She looked at Sunny's old, ragged clothes and felt a tingle of guilt run through her. Sunny had been disguised as a beggar, and shunning the authority of the yuan sao had evidently not allowed him to acquire better clothing. His deep, hollow eyes peered out through the shadows of his gaze, and his hair stuck out, a thin patina of grey. "I had to..." Sunny looked at her, as she rubbed the place where she'd been burned with the blade. "He was planning to..." "Who?" "Malcom." "Who is Malcom?" The moonlight soaked through the bare window and shone upon the back of the chair which stood by the door. Sunny dropped his arm and grabbed for the chair, frantically turning it over. In the lunar light, Sylaska saw the face of a bearded man studying
