I can open the app now and let it download and install the files.Q: What is the best solution to have a client and a server using HTML5 in their respective browsers? To be specific I have a client and a server where they are using HTML5, jQuery, AJAX, JSON. I am having a hard time making it so that they both use the same script and be able to send and receive messages between each other. I have read about SockJS and webSockets (Taken from comments to this post). I understand that I need to open a Socket and send/receive data from the server-client. I do not understand how I would make it so that every time they click on a button (For example) it sends a message back and forth. A: You can use WebSockets, so the server can send data to the client and the client can send data to the server at the same time. For the communication between the client and the server,
