* Adobe Photoshop Elements Adobe has an even cheaper alternative to Photoshop, Photoshop Elements, at a price that is much more palatable for beginners. It is designed to work on older computers and not be too taxing on the graphics card or CPU. The program gives you the tools to do a lot in a fairly intuitive manner. Many tutorials and books are available for Elements, but it is important to note that the most popular interface and the interface you are most comfortable with is not actually the interface you will be using. So if you are very new to the Mac, working with Photoshop is quite different from working with Elements. Toronto Mayor John Tory released his fall agenda for Toronto Wednesday in the form of a 49-page report. He offered four new announcements: He's boosting the number of TTC shelters from the current 561 to 575, which should be completed by 2020. He's launching a new portable washing facility at Osgoode Hall for the TTC. He's raising the budget for library repairs by $20 million. He's going to create a task force to consult residents about rapid transit, and another task force to do the same for social services. As for that report, in the "Guiding Principles" section, he noted he is "guided by three broad principles." The first is "strengthening Toronto as a great city for the next generation," which has to do with transit, libraries, and the long-term viability of Toronto's physical spaces. He calls for a "world-class public transit system," the expansion of "mixed mode transit" to allow for increased density in the outer reaches of the 416, and the creation of more transfer stations. Tory also wants to roll out the subway extension to York University. He supports a "world-class civic and cultural infrastructure," which will include "an expanded and improved city library system and library system with more quiet spaces," and a "world-class children's centre." He also wants Toronto to be a major hub for film and television, and wants to see a "world-class conference centre," and a "new international trade centre." As for housing, he wants to "build, renovate, preserve and increase the supply of affordable housing." He suggests an additional 40,000 units over the next 10 years. He wants to do more for "cultural equity," and "focus on improving employment equity in our workforce," and build "more inclusive neighbourhoods, and new neighbourhoods" with the goal of "emphasizing and encouraging local connections." He also wants to improve "the quality of life for all Torontonians through the safety and cleanliness of our streets," and "strengthen regulatory frameworks to keep our neighbourhoods and community spaces safe." He even wants to improve at the top of the the column which was then blown over and over again until approximately 80 miles away. Then in the 1960s the highway was built, however due to local protests it was built around the mountain range and still has an elevation of 2,600 feet. The issue before us is the same as before the highway. A few miles from the construction, we begin to see the evidence of the transportation here. We begin seeing the shoulder on the highway separated from the pavement, we see mounds of dirt and rocky outcrops in the distance, we begin to see...now that you ask, "what are those?" Fences. The next thing you know, we see a large fence being erected in front of the highest peak in our little town. It seems that you can rent a giant dump truck and pick out everything that you want to build you a prison. Only, the building is called a wind turbine. This time though, you don't have to haul in rocks and dirt. You don't have to do any kind of digging. All you need to do is pay someone to do it for you. It's not quite as weird as a dumpster filled with dirt, but it is an installation of machinery, and it makes a difference. I'm definitely not the only one who finds the mountain windmills to be a symbol of the evolution of human existence. Our history of existence is a history of this movement towards increasing the amount of power that we use. While many people rightfully see this as a symbol of our destruction, for me it is much more of a symbol of our evolution. It is a plant that uses sunlight to convert the energy from the Sun into electricity to power itself. How cool is that?! Pretty cool! We have been a civilization of purely agriculturalists, who have been living off our farms for thousands of years. It wasn't until the industrial revolution that people began to see the need for a new kind of existence. That is what led to the industrial revolution and the beginning of our current age. The age of money. Our current age has been the age of knowledge. There was a time where you were only allowed to gain access to knowledge if you were a farmer. You weren't allowed to read, you weren't allowed to write. This was the age of the clergy, and it was the age of the plantation owners. That's
