Scene of the Crime Scene of the Crime is a 1971 American crime drama film directed by Arthur Penn. The screenplay, based on the novel of the same name by Robert B. Parker, is adapted by Gayne Rescher from the Parker novel. It stars Richard Widmark, Ruth Gordon, Lee Grant, Tommy Lee Jones, John Cassavetes, and Max Julien. It tells the story of a detective named Bugsy Siegel, who mistakenly thinks he has found the location of a safe deposit box holding the buried loot of a gangster. Plot Bugsy Siegel (Richard Widmark) is a "big-time" Las Vegas high roller, still holding out hope that he can somehow get enough money together to leave the business, buy a home for his wife and children, and make a new start. His latest scheme is to try and con a casino into hiring him as a casino janitor, in order to take advantage of a recently instituted "clean-up" policy that is expected to remove the all but two top employees from the casino. When he stumbles into a hard-to-handle mobster named Beano Peterman (Lee J. Cobb), who is willing to invest in Bugsy's racket, Siegel has to work fast to overcome his 'non-interest' in the business and help him get his mobster fix, in a minimum amount of time. With Beano's help, Bugsy eventually convinces the mobster's associates of the value of Siegel's scam. A photograph of Bugsy's supposed "top hit man" named Harry Duvall (Tommy Lee Jones) as a high school senior and his girlfriend's (Sandra Tarpley) picture of a teenage gang from back in her hometown, are found in Beano's apartment. An alert does not come until the gang leader kills Beano, then steals his computer. After Harry is pursued to the suburbs, he is seen at the scene of a double murder. A girl and her boyfriend are both found stabbed to death. Harry's picture is found on their bodies. From this point on, Siegel is trapped in an incredibly deadly game of cat and mouse. Bugsy is forced to resort to a lot of illegal things to keep himself alive, including killing someone. Siegel notices he is being followed and a thug breaks into his home, ties him up, and watches the television. In the final scene, Bugsy has used the information to out
