Tyrgard is a video game, where the player gets to unlock skills and abilities as they get further into the game. It's extremely rewarding and you will feel like you improved since the first time you played. Guide your archer through waves of monsters, snatching their souls from their bodies. If you strike a hit, the enemies will become marked on a grid, allowing you to see where to aim. Use your abilities to progress further through the game. Enjoy the story of a brave young Viking that is fighting his way through the game. Have fun and try to beat the game! (Information on the first ending has been removed) What people are saying: Alex: "A really great game for both the casual gamer and the more hardcore gamers. There is a lot of strategy in it. Very addicting, I mean... I've been playing this almost every day since release. Hopefully they'll release a fast paced pirate battle mode at some point." "I like how easy the game is to pick up and play. The few times that I didn't understand the game mechanics, I went through the tutorial. The graphics are great. " David: "I really like the idea and presentation. It's really easy to pick up and play. The challenges feel rewarding and the graphics are awesome." Francesca: "This is a really interesting game and I'm looking forward to playing more. It's a strategy game but still fun to play" J.D: "A really good game but because of the lack of instructions at the beginning I got stuck a few times. Even so I kept trying because it is such a fun game and interesting to play" Additional Credits "Little Bit Games" would like to thank the following people for their help in making this game. Housing simulator that allows you to customize your city. You want to take control of your own life. Instead of spending all day at work, you enjoy your free time. Free time that can turn into some serious shopping when the need for an attractive house comes up. In this city-builder you create the next great building. This means the first building you place will determine the type of city you build. Want to build a university? You can. Want to build a mall? You can! This free time can be spent in a very interesting way. You are creating your own unique life as a city-builder. The time you spend, the energy you put into the city, what your city looks like, all these things are important to you. This gives your city a personal touch. Your game will consist of a series of random events and you will not be able to control most of the random events. Some of them are completely scripted and other events are completely random. This may lead to a feeling of abandonment, but this is a game that you can control. The city is built in a day and night cycle. During the day the energy is generated by the sun. And during the night the energy will be generated by the apartments and shops. If you build an apartment the night will get darker. If you built a shop the night will get brighter. This means that your city is your city. The city consists of two layers, the above-ground and the underground. The underground layer is more compact than the above-ground and can be accessed via a subway. The below-ground layer is generated on the fly. You can build apartments and shops

Gets Selected To SXSW (Download Audio) As a part of the expanded Interactive section of SXSW, Jaymes Youngblood, the Texas based, pro-chiptune DJ and producer received an official invitation today to SXSW Music 2012. Youngblood will be at the International Market Place tomorrow April 23rd and 24th from noon to 5pm, providing free chiptune. There will also be an informal dance party going on at the end of the day on Thursday April 24th - one of many free and public dance parties happening around the city during the festival. Youngblood says about the opportunity: Having the means and resources to realize an idea, is an incredible thing. After making a couple of trips to SXSW in the past, I decided to dust off my laptop and explore if I could make the trip a little more resourceful. No money, no passes to buy, no getting invited to perform, no nothing. My hope was to still have a good time while showing the world how much fun I was having without having to make you care. As luck would have it, it was a perfect storm for a sort of underground dance party, low effort and high spirits. Jaymes Youngblood is a DJ in the Dallas, Texas area. Youngblood has been playing electronic music since high school, first stumbling onto it while browsing the local Dallas morning news. He gained a love of chiptune from his friends. After college he started jumping on the scene with a post-hardcore (aka metalcore) band called Cobaltism. In November of 2011 he started playing chiptune sets more often as he and his family would often “be invited” to events and venues. In April of 2012, Youngblood started streaming his sets on Mixcloud. There he met Paul, formerly from Portable Gaming series. The concept was similar to the Metal Storm compilations that they put out back in the day, but they basically combined all of the great underground sound clips from all of their favorite non-mainstream artists. They discussed rounding up some of the popular chiptune makers to do the same sort of thing. A quick IRC chat here and there and a month or so later, here we are. Questions & Answers 1) I had to ask why are you playing chiptune? I’m inspired by chiptune. There has been a weird resurgence of the genre I believe. Nothing has happened over the last year that made
