JACKSON, N.Y. — They're twins: Two siblings found sleeping in the same bed and a similar color scheme that suggest they're linked, so authorities say they're calling one a burglary suspect and the other a victim. The Nassau County Police Department said they found the bunk-bedded siblings, ages 16 and 17, at a home in Valley Stream on Sunday. The boys were sleeping in the same bed and a similar color scheme, and police say they're investigating the case as a burglary. But the 17-year-old is doing less well: He suffered severe head injuries and remains hospitalized in critical condition. According to the Daily News, police are calling the boy a victim in the case. The boys' mother was home at the time of the incident, police said. The boys were arrested on charges of burglary and resisting arrest and police said the 17-year-old victim was assaulted with a closed fist. As is well known, a wire carrier, namely a braided wire rope used in a mining system is generally made of a plurality of the wires twisted together. The wire carrier is put around the mining line, and the carrier is mechanically fixed at the mining line so that it is hard to be separated and removed. Therefore, the wire carrier is usually fixed by a means of binding. For example, in the prior art disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,253,594, the wire carrier comprises a plurality of wires twisted together, and an elongate guide body is provided around the carrier. The guide body includes a pair of semi-cylindrical half bodies and a pair of latching portions extending between the two semi-cylindrical half bodies. A pair of triangular latching heads is provided on each of the latching portions at a predetermined distance from each other. Each of the latching heads has a latching groove to attach the half body with a wire of the carrier. The latching heads are designed with an upper and a lower latching groove to prevent accidental detachment of the half body from the carrier. However, the latching portions are designed with a single latching groove, and for latching to the carrier, the latching groove of each latching head is only a rectilinear hole which can not withstand a force applied in a tensile direction. Moreover, the force required to mount or detach the wire carrier to or from the mining line

What's New In?

Q: Cannot create a new db in Cloud SQL I am running into an issue trying to create a new Cloud SQL database using the newly released PHP API in the Google Cloud SDK. I can create databases using the CLI with the gcloud beta sql databases create command. I have also successfully created a new project using the CLI and have an active service account used for the project. When I use the cloud beta PHP API it seems to return an error saying that the database is already created. The documentation says that the parameters for the createDatabase function should be SQLiteDatabase: Name of the database to create. , Credentials: The credentials used to create the database. This field must be provided if either the SQLiteDatabaseName or the project_id parameter is provided. . $database = Database::createDatabase('weirddb', $credentials, array('project_id' =>'myprojectid')); But if I do this, I get a 500 error and the service has also now been inactive for over 4 hours. What am I doing wrong? A: I have managed to get this working so here is what I did. Notice that my project name was TEST-PROJECT gcloud auth activate-service-account --key-file file.json gcloud config set project TEST-PROJECT gcloud config set compute/zone us-central1-b The credentials used to create the database should be in file.json. file.json { "type": "service_account", "project_id": "TEST-PROJECT", "email": "fgg@google.com", "private_key_id": "KEY-PATH", "private_key": "KEY-PATH" } The database name needs to be changed from weiddb to the new name. Neuroplastic changes in response to regular heroin administration in rhesus monkeys. Heroin treatment is accompanied by characteristic changes in mood and motivation. We used functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) to examine changes in the function of the reward and inhibitory systems in 11 heroin-addicted rhesus monkeys. Monkeys were treated regularly with heroin (1.5 mg/kg subcutaneously) for 5 weeks and compared
