The effect of nerve growth factor (NGF) on the survival of a rat tumor line (RSa) under anoxia was studied. The hypoxic cells become radioresistant after NGF treatment and the maximum effect, in terms of survival, is reached 4 to 6 days after the start of treatment. At later times the radioresistant cells become gradually "aged" and therefore more susceptible to killing by the doses used in this study. For instance, when the gene for TSH receptor beta-1 is inserted into mice, they no longer need to produce thyroid hormone, and they can run at full speed without getting tired. [Paul Steinberger, D.V.M., Ph.D., D.C.S., Ph.D., associate professor of pathology and molecular medicine at School of Veterinary Medicine, UC Davis] So far, this idea of enhancing cognitive performance through metabolic engineering has only been tested in lab animals, but in the future, we may be able to test this idea in people. Maybe cognitive skills could also be enhanced by engineered genes? For example, one might be designed to make a certain neurotransmitter more abundant, or create the precursors for making serotonin. Ideally, one would have to test such a genetic intervention in humans before it becomes a widespread practice.Arthroscopic removal of a ruptured Achilles tendon with a technique of direct visualization and a shortened tourniquet time: a report of two cases.
