Abstract An 1881 map of the eastern portion of the United States with emphasis on Minnesota and the Dakotas. Available through the Library of Congress World Digital Library. Montagu Square Montague Square is a street in the City of Westminster, London, England, named after the 6th Duke of Montagu, John Montagu. The square lies just north of Parliament Square. The entry to the gardens, which are entered through a unique marble arch, dates from the late 19th century. The square is north of Parliament Square and the rail-side of the boundary with the Palace of Westminster, which is marked by the North East corner of the square. History The square is one of the oldest surviving areas of Westminster. The corner built of Portland stone by the Waterloo Memorial Arch Co. in 1854 was intended to commemorate the Battle of Waterloo. The original part of the square was designed by William Craven. More recent buildings occupy much of the eastern half of the square. The brick building on the corner with Great Suffolk Street, the old general post office, now is the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents. The Observatory originally stood on the site of Nos. 1 to 5, but was demolished in the late 19th century. The decorative bronze lion stands at the head of the northern entrance to the square. Montagu Square Gardens In 1864, shortly after the opening of the northern gate to the garden, John Soane designed an elaborately stuccoed Italian-style temple and fountain. It was completed in 1868, although the temple was moved to its current site in 1885, once the gardens had become open to the public. The fountain is
