I just installed Ubuntu 17.10 and in stead of starting wine I get: wine: cannot find L"C:\Program Files\Growl\GrowlHelper.exe" no such file or directory I have already tried reinstalling Wine and deleting the program. What am I doing wrong? I am using VMWare Player for the installation, not directly on the computer. A: Apparently, the Growl helper is the executable used to launch Growl.exe, and is required for it to work. If you installed Ubuntu on VMWare or virtualbox, you may have to change the 'run this program as an administrator' security option in the settings of the virtual machine. See here and here. Q: How do I use a delay to hide a Div when the next Div is visible? I'm still struggling with a simple problem which is that I have multiple divs on a page. They are all stacked on top of each other. Each one contains a background image and text. When I scroll down the page, I want a new div to become visible on the page. When the new div is in view, I want it to not display a new image over the existing one, but instead have the old image fade away to reveal the
