CT-EXPERT by Charmilles Technologies (CT) is a PCA .In the automotive and aerospace industry, the preparation of the surface of metallic components for painting and other coating operations is typically performed by polishing with a polishing compound. The polishing compound may be delivered from a slurry or dispersion formed from a variety of polymer compounds, sometimes in combination with abrasive particles. The slurry or dispersion is applied to a surface, and the surface is dried and/or cured. Examples of slurry/dispersion compositions used for polishing are disclosed in U.S. Pat. Nos. 6,171,257; 6,294,187; 6,316,588; and 6,496,065. Curing is a significant factor in slurry/dispersion composition delivery. Typically, the composition is applied to the surfaces of components and cured under suitable conditions, such as drying. After drying, the dried slurry/dispersion layer adheres sufficiently to the surface, and the composition has a suitable hardness and tensile strength. However, slurry/dispersion compositions are often susceptible to mechanical damage, as well as a lower susceptibility to recoating. Consequently, the slurry/dispersion layer may have to be recoated to protect it from damage. The recoating process is highly dependent on the type of surface being coated and the extent of the damage. Therefore, there is a need to develop new slurry/dispersion compositions having a higher resistance to mechanical damage, as well as a lower susceptibility to recoating.National parks and wilderness areas slated to be closed due to COVID-19 ST.
