So I decided to create a similar scatterplot using a plotly Dash box in O3D. A 3d scatterplot. A single scatter plot that displays 2 variables in a scatter plot. The way I decided to solve this issue was to create two widgets one to display the X-Y plane and other to display the Z axis (principal). How to Use This Tutorial. Prerequisites. There are really two ways to use this tutorials.

The first is to make a scatterplot directly in O3D and the second is to use a Dashbox. The first approach is to make a scatter plot using a. Add the first widget. Generate new data (expressed as X-Y and Z). Generate new data (expressed as Y-Z and X). Make the Y-Z and X-Y widgets. When the widgets are in their final locations, we're done. Drawing the 3d plane. Add a Principal widget. Add a Box widget. The box will display where the box is located in XYZ. Add a third widget. Add a color widget and select the blue color. Add a second box widget. Make sure the boxes overlap (this will help you see how they overlap). I tried placing the box widget in different locations and they all looked a bit off. As you can see in the screenshot, the main widget was at a specific
