Microsoft Windows : Windows . A multi-method approach for the identification of proteins within yeast cell walls. A multi-method approach, using a combination of techniques, was applied to a yeast cell wall protein fraction to characterize the protein composition of this complex structure. The multistep protein purification scheme included selective solubilization of the yeast cell wall matrix by alkaline carbonate treatment and subsequent extraction of glucan released by EDTA. Soluble proteins were subsequently analyzed by blue native polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis (BN-PAGE). This method was used to identify at least 11 proteins (Mr 58, 46, 39, 37, 33, 29, 27, 25, 22, 21, and 19 kDa) that are localized in cell wall fractions. Mass spectrometric analysis of the BN-PAGE separated proteins showed several similarities with proteins of known functions such as glycogen synthase, glycogen phosphorylase and glucanases. In addition, proteins associated with known structural components of the cell wall, i.e., an endo-beta-1,4-methanoglucanase, exo-beta-1,4-methanoglucanase, and a cellobiohydrolase, were also identified. c6a93da74d
