and even if the supermodels are not as well compensated as they once were, the lingerie industry is profitable. victoria secret says it generated $3.6 billion in revenue last year, and earned a net income of $475 million. and the company has been growing its e-commerce business, with sales up 6.5 percent in the second quarter. this year the brand featured models in sizes 32d and 28f, and announced on tuesday that it will carry bras in a range from a small aa to a large b. the company has also begun to advertise a new "curvy" range of bras that features soft cups for everyday wear. the brand is also launching a line of bras with built-in underwire for people with larger breasts. he describes her as a "somewhat boho, a bit hippy" and his favorite part of the process is preparing her for the shoot. while he says the hardest part is getting her to "let go of her inhibitions and just be herself." he also says she's a "great person to work with" and that "she takes her job very seriously."

the models most often photographed for the line are "tattooed, pierced, and have a lot of confidence," he says. they also tend to be "pretty, beautiful women" and, as a result, the industry is "dominated by women." "the last day," he says, "is when they all get together and get the pictures taken, and then they are in their own little world for the rest of the day. they have little rules and expectations they want to make clear. like they don't want the models to be drinking. there's a lot of rules about what not to do." as becca seeks to shift its focus from a one-size-fits-all approach to its customers, the idea is to widen its customer base and bring in more diversity. as a result, in 2015 the brand introduced "artists," a new body type aimed at fit and active women. with the help of the contour model, it hopes to appeal to those customers who like to work out.
