[6] canadian police agents investigated the azov films website after viewing a poster showing pictures of young, nude children on a bulletin board of an online discussion forum called club azov, which itself has been banned by yahoo for promoting the sale of child pornography. the poster included both the name of the original poster and his screen name - lilamilbabex - and showed the faces of three boys, each being offered for sale as a pornographic video. while many of the materials were offered over the internet, the jury heard evidence that that azov also offered in-person services in which customers would meet with an individual who would make arrangements for them to visit azov's facilities to take advantage of the services offered, to include the creation of videos that would be offered for sale or for use on the internet. according to evidence the government offered, individuals would go to azov's facilities and pay for services intended to produce videos. in order to create these videos, the government offered evidence that an azov employee would direct or instruct the individual. the individual could hire another person to participate in producing the images, or the individual could simply shoot the images on his or her own. evidence also was offered that the azov employee would select certain films based on the images produced. some of these videos would be distributed for sale, while others would be shipped to other sites where the materials would be offered for use on the internet. 5ec8ef588b
