Posted by Chuck Noob on 2010-09-12. Ontrack Disk Manager 10 is out and a full version is available. This version was co-developed by Xtreme Systems. It has the following improvements: a) Crash free. b) Provides backup, recovery, and restore for Windows 98/ME/2000/XP operating systems. Ready to download. Ontrack Disk Managers (ODM) v9.57 will be the last version released to support Windows 98. In anticipation of the end of support for Windows 98, we are preparing for the removal of the product from the Microsoft Windows 8 and later platforms. Ok, I've managed to get Windows 10 working on booting from a USB drive after several tries, using the setup that was downloaded from here , ie. EasyRecovery 3.5, 2.7 - I was avoiding Kisek's download because I have an unusually corrupt disc, but the installation process still works fine... I had to do quite a lot of tweaking of the zerodisk, but eventually gave up and went with the defaults. I have EZ-Drive working great on my SATA 320 GB drive, but it never detected my 2 1TB diskettes. I think I enabled drive detection on them. Normally the BIOS has a field to select a drive/diskette to be identified on startup, but if I remember correctly, there is nothing for me to choose on my 320 GB drive. The only thing I found is that in order to boot from the 1TB ones, I had to put CD in drive A, then after booting from EZ-Drive on drive A, I would plug in the 1TB diskettes into drive A and I would be able to boot from the 1TB drives. This, however, gives me errors about the CD drive being in use, which it is not, but I can't figure out what that would be.
