I felt a change in myself: I learned to forgive easily, I became more tolerant, I became more attentive to people. Even though sometimes I felt sadness and sorrow, I was sure that these feelings would soon pass, and I would still be ready to fall in love. I had already learned not to cling to the past. You can't change the past. In the present there is only the now. And I will live it the way I want to. I've learned that I shouldn't look back at people who have forgotten me. If they didn't want to be there, then that's the way it has to be. But I will never forget those who were with me and stayed. And I won't forget the one who was with me and left. I don't say goodbye to anyone for good. I just don't hope to see them again. And that's okay. That's the way it should be. Now I can face my fears with confidence. I can now say goodbye to my hatred. I can live now. In the city that was built in the heart of the desert. The city where I was born. The city I will never go back to. It was so beautiful. I don't understand how anyone could have missed it. I don't remember ever being this happy again! I love him, and I don't want to lose him. How can I live without him? I can face my fears now. I can say goodbye to my hatred now. I can live now. And I can live. I can't hate now. I don't want to hate. I can't hate. I can only love, I can't love, I can only love, I can't love, I can't... I can't... Forgive me if I ever hurt you. If I ever say or think anything that might hurt you, know that I don't hate you. I can only love you. I can't hate, I can't... I can't... I can't... I can't... I can't...

Most Hispanic Christians rely on one version of the Bible, the Reina Valera, which was first published in 1569, 42 years before King James ... This book includes translations from Ancient Greek, Latin, Aramaic, and other languages, which may give the reader the impression that the Bible contains several different versions. In fact, the King James (or King James) translation was the first published English version of the Bible. Therefore, many historians consider the King James translation to be the original text and Bible.

This version of the King James book was published in 1604. It is the first version to be published in England. James was a very religious man and did not want to leave his country without a Bible. The translation of the book was completed in 1603. The book includes the Old Law, the New Law, and the Psalms. It is the first book of the Bible to be published in America. This book became the King James Bible in America. Some of these books were translated from Latin or other languages. James the First wanted the Bible translated into his native language. In 1516 he ordered the Archbishop of Canterbury, Archbishop John Morton, to do so. Morton, however, was too conservative and did not want to translate, so he began looking for a translator. After he found William Caxton, the archbishop commissioned him to translate the Bible. Caxton was a skilled and experienced printer of the time, but he was very shy. He was afraid that someone might know what he was translating, so he decided to keep his copies safe in his private home. There were several rooms in his house in which he hid his work. In one of them he kept his translated books. One day he received a letter demanding that he hand over his translations. The letter said that if he did not comply with the request, he would be accused of heresy, his books would be confiscated, and he would be excommunicated. Caxton did not know what to do. He feared for his fate and for the fate of the works he had already translated. But he and his wife had three children, and he loved them dearly. So it was out of the question for him to give up his decision and start working for hire. But he had many friends among those who worked at the film studio. That's why he applied for the job. Still, someone had to replace him. He had so many acquaintances in Hollywood, so many friends, that it would be very hard for him to be alone. But it was also very difficult for him to work now. And he was in a lot of pain. He suffered from stomach pains. He had frequent headaches. He had a habit of smoking. He had a cough. He had many friends. She had a habit of screaming. She had a habit of sleeping. She had a habit of washing her hands. He had a habit of drinking milk. He had a habit of talking loudly. She was in the habit of wearing a short haircut. She had a habit of speaking softly. She had a habit of reading books. He had a habit of eating candy. He had a habit of going to the park with the dog. She had a habit of eating cereal and milk. He suffered from stomach pains. dd2bc28256
